

ABSTRACT

A protein array having a protein aligned and immobilized in high density and in uniformly oriented form is produced by introducing a polymer compound having a primary amino group as a repeating unit on the surface of a planar substrate so as to obtain a substrate for protein array and binding the carboxyl terminal of the main chain of a protein with the primary amino group of the polymer compound on the substrate.